Russell (Rusty) Ressler is past chair of the trusts, estates & personal planning department. He represents high-net-worth individuals and families, individual and corporate fiduciaries, owners of closely held businesses, and numerous financial and nonprofit/charitable organizations in areas including:

- complex estate, tax, business succession and asset protection planning
- complex trust and estate administrations
- litigation involving trusts, estates, powers of attorney, guardianships and other fiduciary matters
- federal and state tax controversies at both the administrative and judicial levels
- planned charitable giving
- formation and governance of private foundations and other nonprofit organizations
- negotiating and drafting consignment and private sale agreements for artwork; and negotiating, drafting, and enforcing prenuptial, postnuptial and cohabitation agreements

RESULTS

Rusty has represented:

- the owner of a large closely held business in connection with the creation of rolling grantor retained annuity trusts resulting in the gift-tax-free transfer of several million dollars in appreciated stock to dynasty trusts for descendants
- the owner of a closely-held business and various private equity interests in connection with the creation of an intentionally defective grantor trust for “selling” appreciated company stock income tax-free to the long-term trusts to freeze the value of the stock and remove all future appreciation from the owner’s estate
- the owner of various closely held businesses in the formation of a family limited partnership for asset management and enabling the discounting of significant gifts of limited partnership interests to long-term trusts for descendants
