Sabina Corrado focuses her practice on counseling individual and commercial clients at all stages of litigation. She has experience handling matters involving unfair competition, insurance fraud, labor and employment disputes, contractual disputes, trademark disputes, fraudulent transfer, shareholder disputes and premise liability claims.

Prior to joining Stradley Ronon, Sabina was an associate at a midsize law firm in New York. While in law school, she participated in a year-long clinic with the New York Law Department in the Special Federal Litigation Department, where she defended the city in cases involving allegations of police misconduct. Additionally, Sabina served as a judicial intern in the Southern District of New York.
