Andrew J. Barron is an experienced tax, trusts and estates lawyer representing executors, administrators, trustees and beneficiaries in all aspects of trust and estate administration. His clients depend on him to navigate complex family dynamics to efficiently and empathetically resolve conflict. Andrew routinely prepares and reviews income, estate, inheritance and gift tax returns, as well as accountings, nonjudicial settlement agreements and receipt/release agreements. Andrew works closely with high-net-worth individuals to reach their personal and business planning goals. He drafts and reviews wills, trusts, power of attorney, healthcare directives and other estate and business planning documents. Andrew is proud to maintain an active pro bono caseload.

Before joining Stradley Ronon, Andrew practiced trusts and estates at two Philadelphia firms. He also served as an assistant city solicitor in the Major Tax Unit for the City of Philadelphia Law Department and clerked for state trial judges. Andrew received his LL.M. in Taxation with a Certificate in Estate Planning and his J.D. from Temple University Beasley School of Law. While at Temple, Andrew served as an editor for the Temple Political & Civil Rights Law Review. He earned his B.A. in philosophy from Dickinson College.
