David Fitzgibbon concentrates his practice on intellectual property matters, with a focus on patent litigation. While his early career focused on intellectual property procurement, particularly in chemical and mechanical arts, David has seamlessly transitioned to key roles in litigation-related transactions.

Specializing in drafting and procuring patents, David excels in counseling clients on the nuanced scope and significance of their intellectual property rights. His skills further extend to negotiating technology-related agreements on behalf of clients, merging his comprehensive understanding of both law and business.

David has also had significant involvement in providing intellectual property advice to start-up companies. He has been instrumental in guiding clients through the complexities of patenting and commercializing inventions owned by startups and not-for-profit institutions. His adept analyses of patent issues further underscore his commitment to delivering strategic and informed legal counsel to all clients.

Before joining Stradley Ronon, David served as an associate at another distinguished Philadelphia law firm, where he honed his skills in intellectual property litigation and patent work. A graduate of the Temple University School of Law, David distinguished himself as a Research Editor for the International and Comparative Law Journal during his academic tenure.
