Hilary Hannan Saylor represents banks, commercial finance companies and other lenders in commercial loan transactions. She also represents companies in general business and commercial matters.

RESULTS

- represented lenders and borrowers in commercial real estate, acquisition, development and construction finance transactions
- drafted documentation and strategic diligence review in connection with complex acquisitions and financings
- negotiated and drafted a variety of routine contracts, including commercial leases, purchase agreements, and vendor managed inventory agreement
- served as outside general counsel for numerous entities on corporate matters from business formation and operating agreements to restructurings and dissolutions

While in law school, Hilary served as the managing editor for Temple's International and Comparative Law Journal. She was the evening vice president of Temple's Student Bar Association, a fellow in the Rubin Public Interest Law Honor Society and evening outreach chair on the Women's Law Caucus. Hilary was the recipient of the Harriet Robinson Gillock Memorial Fund award. She received awards for excellence in legal research and writing and alternative dispute resolution, and for distinguished class performance in the integrated transactional program, taxation, evidence and civil procedure.

She also served as summer law clerk to Judge Marjorie O. Rendell of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 3rd Circuit.

Prior to law school, Hilary served as a paralegal at another Philadelphia law firm.
