Stephanie Sanderson-Braem focuses her practice in estate and tax planning, trust and estate administration, and estate and trust litigation.

Stephanie represents single individuals, families with young children, families preparing for retirement, families having a child with special needs, closely held business owners, doctors, CEOs, same-sex couples and fiduciaries managing all aspects of trust and estate administration. She advises her clients on premarital agreements, business succession planning, lifetime giving and charitable giving in addition to the preparation and implementation of wills, trusts, powers of attorney, and advance directives. Stephanie provides clients with assistance in more complex planning involving life insurance trusts, family limited partnerships, intentional defective grantor trusts and grantor retained annuity trusts.

Stephanie also represents individuals, banks and trust companies serving as executors and trustees for trusts and estates of various sizes and complexities.

RESULTS

- represented a national bank in 20 different New Jersey cases to successfully have the bank resign as corporate trustee of various trusts
- represented a significant religious organization in asset protection planning and non-profit corporate restructuring
- represented estates of special needs decedents in the termination of their special needs trusts
- represented a client in a record-setting auction sale of a rare pre-revolutionary pie-crust table - attributed to the Garvan carver - which dates back to the early 1760s. Auctioned by Christie's, the antique table sold for more than $6.7 million
- closed one of the largest client estates, saving more than $14 million in federal estate tax. The IRS gave the estate tax clearance without any adjustment to the federal estate tax return
- represented a residual beneficiary of an estate in the protection of estate assets and removal of an executor in Orphans' Court in Philadelphia County in a case involving a legal issue of first impression
